Attendees should review the “Basics of Scrum” video prior to day 1 of training.

Level: Core

Training Topic: Project Management Process

Subtopics: Agile, New Ways of Working

Training Description:

Are you new to product ownership and interested in learning how to successfully perform this role? Or are you already a product owner seeking to “level up” and deal with more complex situations beyond what Scrum teaches you? Do you want to break out of the blindered view of the product only, and look at your role within the broader contexts of the organization?

Disciplined Agile® Product Owner is a six-lesson, instructor-led training that shows you how to be an effective product owner, while also using the Disciplined Agile® (DA™) tool kit to enhance your skills.

You’ll explore the product owner role, as well as expectations and competencies in three different areas: at the enterprise level, in relation to stakeholders, and within teams. In each of these areas, you will become familiar with critical competencies. You’ll discover how to work with minimum business increments (MBIs), coordinate dependencies, and work with portfolio and product management. You’ll learn product road mapping, release planning, and other skills that will enable you to work effectively with stakeholders. And you will become well versed in such team competencies as deprioritizing and prioritizing the work, adding details, and demonstrating the work as integral parts of solution development. And finally, you will learn about the product owner role within a large enterprise.

Filled with activities, supplemental reading, and more, this training will prepare you to become a Disciplined Agile Product Owner.

Learning Objectives:

Upon completion of this training, learners will be able to:

- Describe the role of a product owner.
- Employ enterprise-focused practices for product owners.
- Identify methods product owners can use to perform stakeholder-focused tasks.
- Apply a Disciplined Agile approach to interacting with teams.
- Practice strategies for successful product management within a large enterprise.
